Is there room in California's car culture for the Rhoades Car? Kevin Paglia of Lodi California thinks so! He says he's wanted a Rhoades Car for a while, but when gas prices blew past the $3.00 mark, Kevin plunked down for a Rhoades 4W4P. Son Michael says his dad's idea of fun is rolling past gas stations saying, "Hi ya, suckers...."

With only grainy pictures to go by, it looks like Kevin's got butterfly steering with deluxe seats up front and plastic buckets in the rear. He sprung for the passenger grab handle and the accessory bar but went with six speeds instead of "36". Kevin must have strong legs! At least he got the dual brake option for safety's sake.

Between dropping the kids off at school and running errands, the Rhoades Car is racking up about 40 miles a week. In the month since he got the 4W4P, Kevin figures he's saved about $100.00 – and lost 12 pounds in the bargain!
