

the GROUNDED MASTERS' network

*Is it possible to have reached spiritual mastery
not know it?*

Ascended Mastery:

Many people, including myself, began their journey inspired by the ideal of ascending their consciousness to the level of enlightenment. We formulated images of what to expect at the various stages of progress and our enthusiasm was fuelled by books, workshops, retreats, stories about avatars, observing our teachers' accomplishments, listening to fellow students share their revelations, as well as our own personal breakthroughs. Everyone involved sincerely strived for greater awareness of self.

We spoke of tapping into unlimited power to create at will, of channeling universal knowledge, sharing the wisdom of the ancients, being aware of future events, experiencing time travel & dimensional shifting, contacting UFOs, communicating with guides, mastering astral travel, learning to heal ourselves and much more. Such images are difficult to avoid when some people have become proficient in a specific areas offering evidence that such goals have merit. Certainly having personal experiences, even a hint of success in any of these areas provided enough incentive to keep us charged with energy and empowered with the necessary discipline to keep improving. One realization led to another and the glory of our journey was felt until eventually it became a way of life.

The climb up the mountain of consciousness filled us with magic and awe as we untangled the web of misconception about ourselves, as we gained insight into beliefs that no longer served us, as we discovered new connections with people, nature, guides, spirit world and beyond, and as we developed skills in sensitivity that we only imagined possible. These wonders nourished our motivation to continue the journey, to keep the discipline in our life, and to keep questioning the status of normality.

An Ever Evolving Enlightenment:

I have observed three generations striving for their individual inner greatness and I can recognize how each generation has made the journey easier for the next. Concepts that took decades to become clear to my generation, are common knowledge for the next. In this way we observed how our pioneering spirit, in offering new insights, new concepts and new knowledge manifested itself in an ever evolving human consciousness.

The experience of Ascended Mastery / Enlightenment has evolved since the avatars of the past, those pioneers of consciousness that opened the flood gates of energy that has influenced every generation since.

Today, accessibility to one's personal enlightenment is within each person's grasp and is no longer measured by one individual's miraculous gifts. Instead, a generation is manifesting miraculous gifts with wonders of their own, through reflecting God's words in books and media, by healing the physically and emotionally ill through workshops in self-healing and personal growth, and generating support groups that are adapted to every person's interests. It is through accepting our individual mastery / enlightenment that we are achieving an evolving human consciousness and healing the planet.

I know many who have reached their personal ascended mastery and our consensus is that enlightenment, like the entire universe, is energy vibrating at a particular frequency. When our consciousness dips into the rhythm of that frequency we experience the reality that exists within that sphere.

We feel a profound sense of calmness that is vaguely familiar and totally satisfying. There follows a period of stillness, where suddenly all the dots connect and the logic of one's life is simplified to the point of wondering how it was possible to have made the journey so difficult. One instinctually knows that something profoundly beautiful is happening.

One does not know all the secrets of the universe, we only know the ones that pertain to us. One does not possess infinite power to manifest, only the knowledge that we can. One does not know infinite love, only the love of being in this miraculous moment.

The Next part of the Journey:

*Before Enlightenment
we avoid
harsh energies*

*After Enlightenment
we move through harsh energies
with grace*

I have observed many individuals, who seem to possess an evolved understanding of the life and their part in it, yet fail to fully appreciate their personal level of mastery. What results is ongoing aspiration to delve deeper and deeper into spirituality, invoking more and more discipline for greater levels of consciousness.

The resulting symptoms leads to periods of dissatisfaction, an inability to achieve new goals and a loss of joy in a journey that once had joy cursing through every cell of their body. It is sad to watch (and worse to experience), for I recognize their devotion and their many abilities and I see their lack of self-acceptance, which usually manifests in failures, unhappy scenarios, and eventual poor health.

When we reach our personal level of ascended mastery our class room changes. The mysteries of the universe and ourselves are no longer revealed through continued efforts to raise our frequency or become more spiritual, for we have already reached our unique level of enlightenment. This does not mean that we cease to learn and raise our conscious awareness, instead new opportunities present themselves and our new class room is found amongst the physical elements of nature and society, in the immediate environment around us.

An important emphasis at this turning point in our journey is the need to give ourselves permission to stop and reflect on our achieved awareness and the level of awakening that best serve our happiness. Understanding and living this is to have full 'Love of Self'.

After achieving ascended mastery, your next journey begins as you descend from your mountain top of enlightenment. You leave nothing behind and you lose out on nothing. Instead you bring your new found glory back into the world from whence you came. There, you will radiate your glory amongst the masses, thus becoming a true Grounded Master. This journey down the mountain and into the world has also evolved as each person's passage is making it easier for the next.

The Human Harmonic Orchestra:

Acquiring this level of greatness is similar to joining an orchestra that has been waiting your arrival to enrich their music with the presence of your particular note. Finally you arrive bringing your instrument of life experiences, but you still do not know how to play for your focus has been on getting there. This is where the new journey begins, learning how to move amongst the environment of life itself holding true to your note.

Orchestra
for transition*

Throughout our history, the challenges in this descent has taken its' toll on those who forgot their knowing, or merely became lost in the maze of life's challenges, while others sought the sanctuary of remaining at the top choosing to struggle for more insight. To arrive here at this place of ultimate Self-Love, you have chosen to rewrite your conscious focus, to reawaken your sensitivities in all areas of living and now your enlightened frequency shines its new perspective on the illusions still thought to be true by others.

At this time in our history we need as many inspirational notes actively ringing out as there are people who have achieved their personal level of enlightenment. By doing so, we are birthing a new frequency into the consciousness of humanity. This is evolution; this is our joint purpose as an orchestra of enlightened harmonics acting toward the principle of change.

Conclusion:

It is for this reason that I am motivated to write and share my perspective. I want to see the emphasis on Enlightenment put into its evolved perspective so that one's quest up the ladder of consciousness is less focused on the accomplishments of a few, and totally on accepting our inner beauty for what it is. It gives me great joy to see and hear the note of an evolved spirit ringing clearly as their instinctual truth is felt around them.

Grounded Mastery is learning how to live in physical form, from your place of knowingness. Holding true to your instinctual truths, while in the environment that you find yourself in, is your purpose and nothing else matters. All your actions become your new classroom for your continued conscious growth, whether you are at the store for groceries or speaking at the United Nations on world health.

I have described my past challenges, my present knowingness and my vision for the future. This may make someone's journey easier, less serious, and more of a celebration.

You are welcome to acknowledge your place in the Grounded Master's Network by joining our email list of contacts. Various articles will be offered for your own use to share as you wish. How this Network will evolve is not known, but we can stay in touch through emails.
